

Spring 2012 Health Professions Career Exposition

Tallahassee, Fla. – Job-seeking students of all majors were welcomed to meet and network with employers at the Spring 2012 Health Professions Career Exposition Thursday, February 16. The expo took place at Duxbury Hall in the College of Nursing, from 11a.m. – 3 p.m.

“It was a really good turn out this year and everyone was extremely welcoming,” Meredith Moon, South Georgia Medical Center representative said. “The Career Center did an amazing job advertising and organizing the event. We were able to meet with many students, all of which seemed extremely interested in what we had to offer.”

The Health Professions Career Expo gave students the opportunity to connect with health related organizations and discuss future employment opportunities. Participants included: Capital Regional Medical Center, Georgia Department of Behavioral Health & Developmental Disabilities, National University of Health Sciences and Tallahassee Memorial HealthCare. These organizations were recruiting students to fill full-time, part-time, and internship positions as well as enroll in graduate programs.

“We love coming to the Health Professions Expo,” Portia Houston, Capital Regional Medical Center representative said. “It’s a good way to connect with nursing students and meet a lot of possible future employees.”

Over 120 students attended the expo. Students of all majors including Social Work, Exercise Science, Pre-Med and Nursing majors attended.

“It was a great experience to meet with so many different nursing programs all at once. It was also a good opportunity to learn a lot of important information,” Andrew Gonzalez, student said.

The FSU Career Center hosts and supports other career expos each year in addition to providing comprehensive career services to students. For more information about Career Center services, expos and programs, visit career.fsu.edu or call 850.644.6431.
